OVERVIEW

EXPERIENCE

Dustin Lozano focuses his practice on civil litigation with an emphasis on construction and business law, representing contractors, owners, subcontractors, and design professionals, on both public and private construction projects. As an Associate Attorney at Hunt Ortmann, his construction practice encompasses representation of the client from claim prevention, contract drafting, and consulting through trial or arbitration if necessary. He also counsels clients on how to minimize litigation exposure to help his client's businesses succeed.

Prior to practicing law, Mr. Lozano acquired several years of knowledge and experience in the construction industry serving as a Project Manager for a waterproofing firm in the San Diego area on various structures and works of improvement from project bidding to completion. Within those several years of experience, Mr. Lozano gained a greater appreciation for the construction industry as a whole.

Mr. Lozano was a Roger Traynor Moot Court participant while in law school and received the distinct honor of Top Oralist at the competition. He served as a law clerk for six months prior to becoming an attorney at Hunt Ortmann.

Mr. Lozano enjoys surfing and spending time with his wife and two daughters. He is an avid sports fan, and confident his golf game will improve.
